Interrupted city is an itinerating seminar aimed to the study of new contact points across the divide of Nicosia, Cyprus. It represents a possible dialogue with the new potentials related to the crossing of the Buffer Zone, by rethinking the role of the checkpoints. This research affirms the temporary sense of separation and investigates the tools to identify dynamic and evolutionary factors, overcoming the present condition of the interrupted city. Interrupted city is therefore an opportunity to carry out this research and support, through the most diverse contributions, the preparation of an international workshop to be held in the summer 2019 by stimulating new approaches and collecting materials to develop new projects.
